New Technologies on Construction Safety

The construction industry is rapidly adopting new technologies to enhance safety and productivity. This special issue explores the latest innovations in construction safety, including the use of drones, wearable devices, and virtual reality training. It also discusses the challenges and opportunities associated with these technologies and provides insights into how they can be effectively implemented on construction sites.

INDUSTRY TRENDS

Expansion of service offerings included in scaffolding rental
Scaffolding rental companies are expanding their service offerings to include additional services such as safety training, equipment maintenance, and project management. This trend is driven by the need for more comprehensive and integrated solutions for construction projects.

Adoption of enterprise resource planning (ERP) systems
Construction companies are increasingly adopting ERP systems to streamline their operations, improve resource allocation, and enhance project management. These systems provide a centralized platform for managing various aspects of the business, from financials to human resources.

Utilisation of emerging technologies
The construction industry is embracing emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence, big data, and cloud computing. These technologies are being used to optimize design, improve construction processes, and enhance safety. The integration of these technologies is expected to revolutionize the industry.

Increasing interest rates expected to shape structural growth
Rising interest rates are expected to impact the construction sector, particularly in terms of financing and investment. However, this may also lead to a more focused and sustainable growth structure as companies seek to optimize their capital structure.

Manufacturing construction in China expected to slow, yet increase in Vietnam
While manufacturing construction in China is expected to slow down, there is a projected increase in Vietnam. This shift is influenced by government policies, market conditions, and the growing demand for infrastructure and industrial facilities in the region.
